

Mrs. Hadley Rewarded.

Indianapolis Dispatch 17th.

Mrs. Lula Hadley, the chamber maid at the Hotel English, this city, who was discharged because she refused to make up a bed in which Booker T. Washington had slept, received $1,100 from persons in the South today, making $2,500 which she has gotten from similar sources since her discharge by the hotel management.

One draft for $1,000 came in the evening mail from Southerners at New Orleans and was accompanied by the statement that "you are one thousand times better than any negro." Other drafts received were from residents of Montgomery, Alabama; Wiconna, Miss.; Calhoun, Ala.; and other places. All the remittances were accompanied by letters commending Mrs. Hadley for refusing to make a negro's bed.

While Mrs. Hadley is enjoying financial prosperity as a result of her act, she is also having trouble. Several negroes have insulted her recently, and today she appealed to the police for protection, saying that negroes were in the habit of congregating near her home and making offensive remarks about her. She is in receipt of many insulting letters, which she thinks are written by negroes.

The hotel management is likewise receiving letters from negroes in the North, commending its attitude toward Booker Washington, during his visit to this city.

One Place Left for General Grant.

At a recent meeting of Confederate veterans held in Richmond many amusing tales were told. One of them was how General Grant got the worst of it at the hands of a Southern woman. The Baltimore Sun tells the story:

While Grant was in Charles City county an old lady sent one of her grandchildren to him to know where he was going.

"Tell your grandmother," said General Grant, "that I am going to Richmond or Petersburg, or heaven or hell."

In a little while the boy returned and said:

"Grandmother says you can not go to Richmond, for General Lee is there; you can not go to Petersburg for Beauregard is there; and you can not go to heaven for General Jackson is there."

General Grant very readily saw that only one place was left to him in case he wanted to go somewhere.

When Chaplain Russell, of the Missouri House, prays he wants the members to give attention. His prayers being sent especially for them, he thinks it unseemly for them not to listen. Having observed that the members did not attend to what he said, Rev. Mr. Russell waited the following petition up to the throne of grace a few mornings ago: "O Lord, I ask that those in the house who rise to their feet for prayer may not continue to read their papers while the chaplain prays. Grant that they may have respect for God if they have not for the chaplain."

The Expected Happened.

News and Observer.

Hanna's telegram to Roosevelt, that he would not oppose his endorsement by the Ohio State convention shows that this paper properly sized up the Ohio situation. On the morning it was announced that Hanna was going to fight instructions this year for Roosevelt to a finish, the News and Observer said:

"Ohio is one of the most disappointing of States. Annually or biennially we are treated to a plentiful crop of predictions that something very great is going to happen politically in the Buckeye State. It is either sure to go democratic, or the leaders of one or both parties have put on their war paint preparatory to the scalping that is to follow. But it is rare that the predictions materialize. About the time that everybody is looking for a fulfillment of the prophecies of slaughter, there comes news of a love feast."

Before the ink was dry on the above paragraph, the prophecy of a love feast was fulfilled. Mr. Hanna knows what is good for his bread and butter, and he does not propose to jeopardize that seat in the Senate.

Says Peruna Made him Drunk.

Trenton Herald.

A man was arrested here Tuesday on the charge of drunkenness and taken before the Recorder and fined $6 15. He swore he had nothing to drink except Peruna and he had an almost empty bottle of the decoction in his pocket. If it be true that this stuff will make a man drunk, the sale of it should be stopped at once, and if a man persists in selling it he should be prosecuted just as a man would for selling whiskey. It is not the intention of the law to take the making of drunks from one man's hands and putting it into those of another. Judge Bell in his charge to the grand jury at Waverly, gave notice that any one selling Peruna would be prosecuted and given the full penalty for violating the liquor laws.

Wilmington Messenger: The newspapers of today are filled with accounts of homicides. It is remarkable to what extent the disregard for human life has grown in the last few years. If one man has a misunderstanding with another now a days it is usually the thing for him to arm himself with a pistol or rifle and seek redress in this way and then when indicted for murder he pleads self defense or insanity and generally succeeds in escaping just punishment.

Charlotte Observer: The farmers of this county say that they have very poor prospects for a good cotton crop this year. They are just finishing the planting and the weather has been such as to form a hard crust over the seed planted before the last rain, so that it cannot come up. It is estimated that one eighth of the land planted in cotton is being plowed and planted in other crops or replanted in cotton.

The cattle king of the western plain is passing away for ever. A few years ago there were nearly one hundred millionaires exclusively cattle men in the southwest; now there are but thirty.

Pitiable Ignorance.

Statesville Landmark.

It is learned from the Youth's Companion that the sales of Webster's Blueback spelling book have been phenomenal. The history of the firm which published this book for thirty-five years, published recently shows that the smallest number sold in any one year was more than a third of a million copies in 1862, and the largest number was more than a million and a half in 1866. During the thirty-five years more than 31,000,000 copies of the book were sold and used in the schools, and it is still used by some, notwithstanding the effort of modern educators to retire it. Notwithstanding the popularity of this wonderful book, to which millions of people owe their education, and which is the foundation of all real education, the Progressive Farmer says that it recently found a college professor that confessed he never saw a copy of the book, and a North Carolina editor said that he had searched Aesop's Fables in vain for the story of the man whose ox was gored. The idea of a man who never studied the Blueback teaching in a college or undertaking to edit a newspaper! And yet we talk about this being a day of educational advancement. Such ignorance is pitiable.

The German papers comment freely upon the new press censor law, most of them predicting that the measure will be short lived and declaring that it is fit only for Russia and not for free America.—Ex.

S. G. PARSONS, Dep. Collector,

A Sad Blow to Ten Men.

The Rev. Sam Jones on one occasion delivered his sermon called "Wives and Husbands" before an immense gathering at Birmingham, Alabama. He dwelt particularly on the beauty and utility of mutual forbearance between the husband and wife and then, as desirous of showing the rarity of that quality said:

"If there is a woman in this vast gathering who has never said an unkind word to her husband, she will please stand up."

A woman arose as though she had been challenged, and Jones beckoning her with both arms, cried out:

"Come here, sister! come right up to the platform."

The woman did as bidden, and when she reached the preacher's side was presented to the throng as the most beautiful woman in Birmingham! Jones, continuing his address, asked that any man who had never spoken an unkind word to his wife to let himself be known. Promptly arose ten big, strapping, self-conscious chaps, who started for the platform without further bidding and with an air that suggested the anticipation of praise from the preacher, who, as they neared him said:

"That's right, my men! Come right up! I want every body here to gaze on ten of the biggest hars in the United States."
